In 2003 she was awarded a PhD from the University in Oslo for a thesis on autotransplantation of teeth. For the publication from this work she received the American Journal of Orthodontics and Dentofacial Orthopedics Dewel Orthodontic Award in 2002. In 2014 she was awarded a habilitation in medical science from the Medical University in Warsaw on her work related to orthodontic treatment of patients with periodontitis.

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY APPLY TOOTH TRANSPLANTATION IN EVERYDAY ORTHODONTIC PRACTICE?

Tooth transplantation, especially in growing patients, is an attractive alternative for treating dental agenesis, upper incisor avulsions and tooth impactions. Successful transplants not only provide a life-long tooth replacement but can also preserve the alveolar bone and promote bone regeneration in deficient alveolar processes. Tooth transplantation is a technique sensitive procedure and requires careful diagnosis and case selection, a good understanding of relevant tooth transplantation biological principles and careful execution of the optimal surgical and follow-up protocols. Developing premolars are considered to be the optimal donors, but also developing third molars, impacted immature teeth and mature premolars can be successfully transplanted.

The protocol for autotransplantation of developing teeth introduced at the University of Oslo in the early 60's has been successfully implemented in Poland for the last 20 years. During this presentation I will highlight the following:

- Donor selection: orthodontic indications and surgical considerations
- Key factors during surgery and follow-up
- Solutions to possible complications in light of other treatment alternatives
- Key factors for satisfactory esthetics of premolars transplanted to the anterior maxilla
- Guidelines for transplantation of developing wisdom teeth and impacted teeth
- Potential for alveolar bone regeneration
- Effective patient communication

The concepts will be presented using various clinical examples and they will be supported by relevant scientific evidence.
